Las Fallas.

Valencia, Spain, is a town of under a million people, but from 15th to 19th of March it is full of visitors; almost three million of them! The reason is Las Fallas, which means ‘the fire’ in Valencian. This is the local festival that celebrates the end of winter.

When the festival begins, the city becomes one big, celebratory street party! Happy people funny-looking, colourful outfits or traditional costumes spend the days and nights exploding smoke bombs and firecrackers and dancing to loud music. There are also very beautiful fireworks displays every night. The festival ends on the night of 19th March when people burn the ‘ninots’.
